ABOUT GAJRAULA

Gajraula as an important destination for Professional and Technical Education

With the establishment of Shri Venkateshwara University in Gajraula, it had been emerging as an important destination for higher education of the country. Gajraula is situated near river Ganges in Delhi-Lucknow NH 24, around 120 km away from New Delhi Railway Station in the district of Amroha (erstwhile Jyotiba Phule Nagar) which is a historical place in UP which is named after the rich abundance of Amar and Rohu in the three rivers flowing through the district. Prior to the functioning of Shri Venkateshwara University the options available for majority of populations were pursuing general courses from government degree colleges. In all these districts there were no public universities and the onus of providing technical and professional education has been taken on by private players. Considering these facts Shri Bankey Bihari Educational & Welfare Trust (SBBEWT), the promoter of Shri Venkateshwara University chose Gajraula to establish their first University venture in Gajraula.

The functioning of the Shri Venkateshwara University was a real fill up for the reputed educational institutional institution in the district. The University was instrumental in promoting excellence in higher education and giving equal access to professional, technical and better higher education to the rural population who are mostly hailing from agriculture backgrounds for a vibrant and inclusive society through knowledge creation and dissemination.

The connectivity of Gajraula is excellent as it is situated on National Highway 24 and is adjacent to National Capital Territory. Gajraula is also well connected with rail route as it lies on main Delhi-Bareilly track. The nearest airport is in Delhi and the town of Gajraula has all the modern amenities available including prestigious food chains and factory outlets of leading multinational companies.

Western UP's cultural ethos, tradition and values are so ingrained in this soil that it is bestowed with magical powers to sprout uncanny talents and genius. Anyone groomed in this environment has the opportunity to undergo a steady transformation, to flourish in life ingrained with the traits of greatness, professional excellence and integrity.

You are welcome in this modern Gurukul. Enjoy the process of learning, absorbing and implementing. You will be surprised with what you have become and will not believe when you unleash your potential.

SCHOOL OF LAW & JURISPRUDENCE

LAW & JURISPRUDENCE

Law professionals are characterized as “Social Engineers”. Law as a profession and legal education as a discipline was not a popular choice of the students in India prior to the introduction of five year law course. In a democratic country like India, where rule of law is the driving force of the Government, legal education assumes great significance. The study of law in order to be meaningful has to be context of social realities. The legal education in India is regulated by multiple agencies including University Grants Commission (UGC), Bar Council of India (BCI), The Government and the respective University authorities. It is pivotal duty of everyone to know the law. Ignorance of law is not innocence but a sin which cannot be excused. Thus, legal education is imperative not only to produce good lawyers but also to create cultured law abiding citizens, who are inculcated with concepts of human values, legal ethics and human rights. Imparting of legal education has always been considered as one of the noblest profession. Today, legal education derives its impetus from the economic, social and political set up of this society.
